Then came a cry from the sea, Oh, hands at my heart to carch, How should they know the rand to go, And how should they lift the latch?

And the modding mother sighed.
"The sorrow makes ye duff,
Have ye not heard the cry of the tern
to the wall of the wind-blown gull?"

"The terms are blown inland, The gray guil follows the plow. Twas never a high the voice I heard, Oh, mother, I hear it now?"
